

Stag Parkway Inc. sets a positive example for the rv and camping industry by becoming a Silver Sponsor of the PA RV and Camping Education Foundation (PRVCEF). Their generous donation of $1,000 will benefit numerous individuals who want to further their education in the rv and camping industry.

“As good industry citizens, all of us that have enjoyed the success of this RV industry should feel it a privilege to invest in the training of young men and women who are choosing to make this their career,” says Michael McKay of Stag Parkway. “You don’t have to go far to find that dealerships are finding it increasingly more and more challenging to find qualified technicians. Without enough well trained personnel, we can’t continue to take more share of the consuming public’s discretionary leisure time wallet. PRVCA, RVDA, RVIA, RVAA and the other aligned state associations should be applauded for their efforts and dedication to the pursuit of education. I would encourage suppliers, dealerships and distributors who want a prosperous industry to take the time to better learn how they too can support these initiatives.”

Rebecca Lenington, Executive Vice President of the PA RV and Camping Association says, “With support from Stag Parkway, and other sponsors, the Education Foundation will be able to make a difference in the RV and camping industry. We are encouraged that Stag Parkway is willing to help lead the way in this very worthwhile cause.”

PRVCEF is dedicated to creating education opportunities for individuals who would like to make a career in the RV and private campground industry. To date, over 80 students nationally have been helped through the programs sponsored by PRVCEF. Students can become a trained RV Technician through the RV Technician Apprenticeship Program, RV Technician Distance Learning Program or the RV Technician Training at the Northampton Community College Campus. PRVCEF makes scholarships available to students of the technician training programs as well as the Oglebay School of RV Park and Campground Management.
